TRILANTIC Launches Legal-Specific Foreign Language Translation Service

London February 1, 2008 - TRILANTIC, a leading eDiscovery specialist, today announces the launch of TRILANTIC Translation Services, a mass foreign language document translation service, specific to the needs of the legal market. Unique to the industry, TRILANTIC has partnered with Translution, a leader in translation technology to provide a service that meets the needs of law firms and corporations with multinational and/or, multilingual document translation needs.

An industrial strength translation service, TTS is considerably more accurate than any of the web-based tools currently available, combining cutting edge technology with practice and case specific dictionaries. Law firms can analyze vast amounts of multi-lingual documents, quickly and efficiently, reducing the need for local translators. Human error and misunderstanding are minimized as is the need for short term resource when specific cases arise, giving the legal team access to the documents in days rather than weeks.

Speed to review, compliance and risk management is therefore improved as relevant data can be identified quickly. Firms can take on multinational cases and projects more effectively and ultimately pass this benefit onto their clients.

In comparison to human translation the cost and time savings are significant. Typically, human translation is a laborious and costly exercise and for the cost of translating 2 words, TRILANTIC Translation Service can translate 250 words in a fraction of the time.

The average translator works at a speed of around 10 pages per day. With TRILANTIC Translation Services, this is cut to 6,000 pages per hour, therefore the time savings are huge.

TRILANTIC will be hosting an interactive session at the LegalTech New York Conference on Thursday, February 7th. The session entitled “Foreign Language Documents-problems and solutions” starts at 11:45am and is open to all LegalTech conference goers. Please contact David Campbell at david.campbell@trilantic.co.uk for further details.
