New York -

London January 24, 2008 - TRILANTIC, a leading UK-based electronic discovery specialist, announces their sponsorship of two SuperSessions at the annual LegalTech New York conference being held February 5-7th at the New York Hilton. As part of the TRILANTIC sponsored SuperSessions, a panel of U.S., U.K. and Australian litigation support experts will lead forums on such topics as international e-discovery rules and standards and foreign language documents.

The sessions will be on Thursday, February 7th in Nassau Suite B at the New York Hilton, site of the annual LegalTech conference.

The first session titled, "International eDiscovery Rules, Standards and Challenges" begins at 10:15 a.m. and will include a panel discussion among a group of well-known and regarded U.S., U.K., and Australian experts in the field of litigation and electronic discovery. Participating panellists including George Socha, Browning Mearns, and Laura Kibbe will discuss significant developments in the past year and challenges faced when managing international litigation.

TRILANTIC's second session, beginning at 11:45 a.m. will address problems and solutions with foreign language documents. LegalTech conference goers may attend both TRILANTIC-sponsored SuperSessions included as part of their conference registration.
