"I am absolutely delighted that TRILANTIC received the Highly Commended mention. Having been short listed for the last 3 years it is tremendous that all the hard work put in by the whole TRILANTIC team is recognised not only by our clients but a wider audience. This is a great start to what I am sure will be an interesting year," said Nigel Murray, TRILANTIC's Managing Director.

The fourth annual Legal Technology Awards is sponsored by Legalease, publisher of Legal Technology Journal, Legal Business and the Legal 500 Series. They recognize and celebrate excellence in the provision and implementation of technology solutions for the benefit of the legal practice.

The Electronic Disclosure Support/Service Provider of the Year award is based on a list of criteria that includes financial/commercial; adding new business value; productivity/effectiveness; cost reduction; brand recognition; innovation; client/user satisfaction; client testimonial and a client list. After completing the nomination questionnaire, companies are then selected and placed on the shortlist. Once shortlisted, nominees participate in an all-day event presenting their products and services to Judges who have the final say at the end of the evening and award the winners.

TRILANTIC was also named a Top Electronic Discovery Service Provider - Law Firm Rankings, by the highly respected and comprehensive 2008 Socha-Gelbmann Electronic Discovery Survey Report. TRILANTIC was the only EU-based provider to make the list of top 20 providers in both the 2007 and 2008 surveys.
