TRILANTIC Shares Perspective on Safe Harbor at the Masters Conference

EU-Based Legal Support Company and U.S. Electronic Discovery Expert Join Together to Educate on Safe Harbor Matters

LONDON (October 8, 2008) – London-based TRILANTIC, the leading EU-based electronic discovery service provider, today announced that Nigel Murray, TRILANTIC's founder and managing director, will present along with John Tredennick, Esq., CEO of Catalyst Repository Systems, at the Masters Conference on October 16, 2008. Murray and Tredennick will discuss "Safe Harbor: Discovery Management in a Borderless Corporate Environment."

The Safe Harbor framework was developed by the U.S. Department of Commerce and the European Commission in order to establish an adequacy standard for privacy protection when transferring personal data between non-European Union nations and the EU. As a large number of litigation and regulatory cases being fought in the U.S. have a U.K. or European dimension, TRILANTIC's experience in Europe and its comprehensive service offering to U.S. clients are particularly strong.

The Masters Conference will take place in Washington, D.C. at the Ronald Reagan Building, October 16-17. The third annual conference is focusing on the corporate entity as the target for e-discovery preparedness. The Masters Conference is an intimate forum where speakers, legal professionals and legal vendors can share, collaborate and obtain master knowledge of e-discovery. Maintained on a small scale the Masters Conference is meant to be an exclusive opportunity to learn and network with the top legal professionals in the industry. Information on the agenda and registration is available at www.themastersconference.com.

"I am delighted to be speaking at the Masters Conference," said Murray. "TRILANTIC's experience in handling international matters brings expertise to the discussion of Safe Harbor and all the issues associated with non-English documentation."

TRILANTIC recently celebrated their third anniversary. With the growth of TRILANTIC, they have several recent developments which include:

- New Web Resource: TRILANTIC now provides the EU Data Protection Rules for data collection and removal for all 27 Member States via their Web site.
- New Service: TRILANTIC Translation Service (TTS). TTS is the first translation service that utilizes the accuracy of human translation with the power of technology. TTS can translate 6,000 pages per hour.

In addition, TRILANTIC has established a network of data protection lawyers across Europe to provide matter-related advice.
